

Ambassador Peter Allgeier: Global Trade Today

Peter Allgeier's presentation highlights four major pillars of today's international economic landscape that impact the U.S. economy and the flow of global commerce. Ambassador Allgeier provides both the anecdotes and "statistical storytelling" that illustrates what these pillars truly mean for organizations large or small, across the industry spectrum.

The Changing Nature of Manufacturing

What factors have caused this changing nature? What does it mean for employment, productivity, and the labor market?

Services Revolution

What types of activities or workflows is this revolution disrupting? How is services trade tracked and measured globally?

Digital Revolution

Who does this revolution impact? How has this revolution shifted the labor market?

Global Supply Chain Shifts

What manufacturing and trade practices have these shifts greatly transformed? How are business and government leaders reacting to these major shifts?

Ambassador Allgeier also provides updates on key global trade developments that every executive should be aware of, such as:

- The China Challenge
- "Buy America" Speedbumps
- Key Global Trade Disputes
- A New Era for Microchips
- Export Control Upticks
- Trade and Climate Change
- The Russian Elephant In the Room

$1,000 for virtual presentation,
$2,500 for in-person presentation plus all travel expenses

Presentation customizations available at hourly rate

Ambassador Peter Allgeier is President of Nauset Global LLC. He served as Deputy US Trade Representative (2001-2009) and U.S. Ambassador to the World Trade Organization (2005-2009). Before his appointment as Deputy USTR, Ambassador Allgeier served in a series of senior positions: Assistant USTR for Asia and the Pacific; Assistant USTR for Europe and the Mediterranean; and Associate U.S. Trade Representative for the Western Hemisphere. He served as President of the Coalition of Service Industries (CSI) from 2012 until 2016. CSI is the association representing the international trade and investment interests of the American service economy, including major international companies from the banking, insurance, telecommunications, information technology, express delivery, audiovisual, energy services, and other service industries. From 2009 to 2012, Ambassador Allgeier was President of C&M International, a trade consulting firm based in Washington, DC. He has a Ph.D. in International Economics from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; an MA in International Relations from Johns Hopkins University, and an A.B. in International Relations from Brown University. He also was a Rockefeller Fellow at the Harvard Divinity School.

Email Speakers@Poligage.com for booking inquiries or more information.

Visit www.Poligage.com to learn more about all of the expertise and services we offer.